An ethical servant leader with a high level of integrity who has enormous experience that cuts through Human Resources, Financial Management, Training and Development, Project Management and ending the corporate career at executive level. The experience at executive level in my career was my ultimate realisation that business ethics are key for the benefits of various stakeholders in business. As an ethical leader, one had to make decisions that would make one to sleep. With a sound experience of PMBOK (project management body of knowledge), stakeholder relationship management and strategy execution without cutting corners in decision making created animosity in the boardroom that saw some directors cutting relations with me as an employee.
